▶ Family Protection

Life insurance can be a simple answer to a very difficult question, “How will my family be affected financially when I die?” This is a subject none of us really want to think about, but if we have someone financially dependent on us, it’s one we really can’t avoid.

The purpose of life insurance is to pay a lump sum benefit after you die, providing your loved ones with financial security should the unthinkable happen. Life insurance can pay for your family’s ongoing living costs, to settle estate taxes, mortgages or other outstanding loans, to cover the remaining cost of your children’s education or any number of other essential expenses.

Whether you have already established a solid financial base for your family – a home, savings and investments – or you are just starting out as a new family with all these goals in mind, life insurance is the foundation upon which it all rests. Having this foundation can protect your family from having to make drastic lifestyle changes or future plans if you were to die suddenly.

Protecting your family through the different stages of your life

Single

Most single people don't have any financial dependants but there are exceptions.

If you're supporting parents or siblings; or carrying significant debt you wouldn't want passed on to family members, you should consider life insurance.

Couples

Many families depend on two incomes to make ends meet.

If you died suddenly, would your spouse or partner have enough money to cover your funeral costs, credit card balances, outstanding loans and daily living expenses?

Raising children

Raising children is tremendously rewarding but can also be tremendously expensive. If you died tomorrow, would your spouse or partner be able to financially provide your children with the opportunities you had planned for them? Would there be enough income to pay for school and college or university as well as all the living expenses along the way?

Considering life insurance for a non-working spouse can be just as important as insuring the breadwinner of the family as they perform important functions that would be expensive to replace such as raising the children and running the household.

Single parents need to consider life insurance more than anyone else as their children are so critically dependant on them.

Servicing a mortgage

For most people, the family home is their most significant financial asset and their mortgage is their most significant liability.

If you have a mortgage, consider life insurance for the value of the mortgage to provide your family with the security of a fully paid home if the worst should happen.

Approaching retirement

Once your children are on their own and your mortgage is paid off, you may no longer need life insurance.

If you died today, your spouse could potentially outlive you by many years. Consider whether they would have to make drastic lifestyle adjustments to make ends meet and whether you have adequate life insurance cover in place to ensure they avoid financial struggles in retirement.

Estate Taxes

The governments of approximately 40 countries levy some form of death duty, estate duty or inheritance tax on the estate of a deceased citizen or tax-resident, which must be settled by that person's beneficiaries. Life insurance is often the most cost-effective solution to help a family pay these taxes.

Consider whether your family is exposed to this potential liability and whether life insurance could be the solution to help them avoid having your estate broken up to pay the taxes due.

The Journey of Life is unpredictable and as we progress through life, we may need life insurance to address the changing risks our families may face.

Here are some examples of when life insurance may be important or necessary.

▶ How much cover do you need?

The most important (and possibly difficult) part of buying life insurance cover is determining exactly how much cover you need. As each person has different goals, financial and personal circumstances, there is no general standard for how much each person should buy.

We suggest you consult with your financial adviser or insurance broker and review your personal and family circumstances described earlier. The next page contains some points to consider as you go through this process.

How to calculate what your family will need

Estimate, if you were to die today? What your family would need to meet immediate, ongoing, and future financial obligations (see below for some examples).

IMMEDIATE CASH NEEDS	 Funeral Costs	 Medical Expenses	 Probate Fees	 Legal Fees	 Mortgage Payments	 Credit Card Debt	 Other Loans	 Estate Duties
ONGOING CASH NEEDS	 Food	 Housing	 Utilities	 Transport	 Health care	 Clothing	 Insurance	 Schooling
FUTURE CASH NEEDS	 Tertiary Education	 Spouse Retirement	FAMILY PROTECTION CALCULATION	Then consider what resources are already in place, such as your spouse's income, savings, investments and life insurance you already have. The difference between these is your current life insurance gap. $\text{Immediate, Ongoing and Future Cash Needs} - \text{Spouse's income, savings, investments and existing life insurance} = \text{Life Insurance Gap}$

FAMILY PROTECTION CALCULATOR

You may wish to make use of the Unisure Family Protection Calculator on our website to help you work out your potential life insurance needs.

This calculation may seem simple enough but there are many potential inputs and thinking of them all can get overwhelming. You'll also need to consider the effects of inflation and make assumptions about what returns are likely on invested lump sums. A financial adviser or insurance broker can assist with some of these areas.

Business Protection

Key Person

Key Person insurance can help a business protect itself from the sudden death of an important person who generates significant revenue because of their business relationships.

Or someone who is the intellectual capital of the business because of their knowledge, experience or skill set.

Or simply the costs incurred in recruiting and training someone to replace an important employee.

Shareholder Protection

Shareholder Protection insurance could allow surviving shareholders to retain control of their former partner's shares.

Not having this protection in place could lead to family members becoming actively involved in a business when they have no knowledge or experience.

Business Loan

Business Loan insurance can help settle business loans which are linked to a shareholder or another key employee.
